A photograph of a Chinese luger, wearing a white and red uniform with the Beijing 2022 logo and the number 4, celebrating a victory. He is holding a large Chinese national flag above his head with both arms raised. He is wearing a yellow helmet with 'uvex' written on it and goggles. The background is blurred, showing other people and stadium lights.

The image is a wide horizontal banner. On the left, there's a colorful illustration of a traditional Chinese dragon and tiger mask. Next to it is a large, stylized vertical calligraphy in red and blue ink. The background is a light blue gradient. In the upper right, there's a white snowflake. Below the snowflake, two skiers are shown in mid-air against a dark blue background. At the bottom right, a snowboarder is performing a trick on a slope. The overall theme is a blend of traditional Chinese elements and modern winter sports.

The image shows the official logo for the Beijing 2022 Winter Olympics. It features a stylized, colorful figure composed of blue, red, yellow, and green lines against a light blue background. Below the figure, the text "BEIJING 2022" is written in a bold, sans-serif font, with "BEIJING" above "2022". To the right of "2022" is a small circular emblem containing a traditional Chinese character. Below the main logo, the five Olympic rings are displayed in their standard colors (blue, yellow, black, green, and red). The entire logo is set against a light blue background with faint white diagonal lines.
